Playing a tie game in football is like locking your car with the keys in the ignition.

The North High-South High 32-32 football game Friday was different. Both teams carried a spare set of keys and refused to be locked out of an exciting game.

The man in the driver's seat was Jeff Wang.

Probably the best compliment that could be paid to Jeff came from North coach Ed Levy. After the game, when both teams gathered in the middle of the field for the traditional singing of the alma mater. Levy kept the traditional singing of the alma mater. Levy kept looking around for Wang. It wasn't until the players headed for the dressing room that Levy caught up with the youngster to pay tribute to him for a startling per-

Hansen played a great game on offense and defense for North. It may have been the best of his career.
On a number of rollouts he got important yardage. One of his ends, Bob Frasquillo, came off a first half tackle with a bum leg and may have been missed as a passing target in the second half.

The Saxons put a lot of pressure of South quarter-back Walter Scott in the game. A couple of times there was even a little "extra curricular activity," but the officials were too busy watching Wang run with the ball on a football field.

South played the whole game without Mike Farber, the lad who usually does the best job of blocking for Wang and who is real tough in the defensive secondary. But nobody could have been missed in this game. No matter who the coaches put in there, the kids reacted with all their hearts. There is no substitute for that.

Rams — Fit To Be Tied
